

7 Travel Strategies for Mobilizing the Modern Workforce

In Why Business Travel is the Center of the New Company Culture American Express Global Business Travel argued that travel is key for driving company culture. The report identified 5 ways organizations can use travel to support and enable employees in an age of remote and hybrid working.

Travel policy is a critical lever for shaping employee experience: we tested 7 travel policy strategies with nearly 3,000 employees and more than 2,000 employers to understand if travel managers are adjusting policy in the ways that provide the most value to today's workforce.¹

Asked what they want from the travel policy, surveyed employees prioritize wellbeing measures.

Employers and employees agree - adapting travel policy to support the modern workforce makes business sense, making the company:

Forward-thinking companies are already adapting travel policy to accommodate the modern workforce.

More than 60% surveyed have adopted – or are working to adopt - policies based on the 7 strategies.

According to our polling, smaller companies, with between 51 to 100 employees, are fastest when it comes to implementing the 7 strategies.

For more insights into how travel and meetings can support organizations in the age of hybrid and remote working, visit the Amex GBT Business Travel Resources Hub

GLOBAL BUSINESS TRAVEL

1 Methodology: Research company The Quorum surveyed 2,973 employees and 2126 employers between September 21 and October 4, 2023. Respondents were drawn proportionately across Australia, the United Kingdom, and the United States.